HISTORY

Founded in 1954, Young Life of Canada's desire has always been "Every Kid Everywhere for Eternity". Knowing the importance of summer camps, Young Life set out to find the perfect place to build a camp. The criteria for a suitable property included: proximity to the services of an urban centre, a sense of isolation, exclusive access to a body of water for boating and water sports and that it would be a location a reasonable distance from major Young Life centres in Western Canada. The most important requirement was the intangible WOW factor – the property should astound its guests and confront them with the possibility of a loving creator.

After searching for 5 years a 5,400 acre ranch outside Princeton, BC was decided upon. After a diligent fundraising campaign only ¼ of the negotiated price to purchase the property was raised. With time running out, a long time Young Life supporter bought the entire ranch and donated 1,500 acres to Young Life Canada.

The ground breaking ceremony was hosted in the spring of 2001 and construction of the main building, dormitories and swimming pool proceeded over the coming years. By the spring of 2004 construction was coming to a close and camp officially opened on July 1, 2004. The grand opening of camp coincided with the 50th anniversary of Young Life Canada and over 1,200 people were in attendance.

Over the next few years RockRidge Canyon would continue to expand. From 2005-2007 the main project was centered around Inspiration Lake. Originally the lake was an 800m walk from camp. By damming the valley we were able to raise the lake 21' and bring the water's edge right up to camp. Our deluxe 45 room lodge, Wolfe Creek Lodge, was completed in 2009. The lodge is used to house staff and volunteers during the summer and guests throughout the remainder of the year.

RockRidge Canyon now hosts eight weeks of Young Life camps each summer as well as a New Year's Camp, Leadership camps and Women's Camp. Our facility is also used by close to 100 guest groups during the school season. We invite you to become part of the RockRidge Canyon family by booking your next retreat with us.

WORK CREW

The Need

Work Crew is one of the most integral aspects of our community at RockRidge Canyon. Without recruitment of volunteers to work for your retreat, our costs would be astronomical. We ask each group booking a retreat with RockRidge Canyon to provide one work crew worker for every ten guests in attendance.

These volunteers will be responsible for meal set-ups, serving, bussing, dishes and final kitchen clean up. There is no charge for the Work Crew that you bring and their meals and housing will also be provided for them.

Who Can be Work Crew?

Anyone who is willing to volunteer their time and is 15 years of age or older is a potential candidate for Work Crew. While there is definitely free time for the work crew, these volunteers need to understand that their main responsibility while they are here is to provide meal service for your group. During their time at RockRidge Canyon, the workers will be divided into three main groups, kitchen help, dining room help, and dish washers.

Win/Win

Many groups use our work crew program to provide two retreats for the price of one. While it is unrealistic for those on the work crew to be involved in the main retreat you are hosting, often a group will create a leadership or service oriented retreat around the work crew volunteers.

In order for your booking to be billed at the quoted rate, it is your responsibility to provide an adequate work crew for your retreat, however, if you find this to be a problem it does not automatically stop you from booking a retreat with us. We are more than willing to look for help in this area!

HOW TO BOOK

When booking a retreat at RockRidge Canyon your cost is customized to your group's particular needs. To receive a quote please contact our Guest Group Communicator. Your representative will create a per person cost working within your specific requests for your groups experience.

Some user fees may apply to recreation options, again contact your Guest Group Communicator for all activity pricing, limitations and options.

Please also note that RockRidge Canyon may have more than one group onsite during any point in time. Recreation and program scheduling will be prioritized based upon the rental group size.
